GENERAL POWELL PLANS.—A general lately in Washington reports to us what he heard Gen. Pope say of his strategy, in regard to one of the questions now before the public. "I want to kill 'em; they have got to be killed, and it is not for me to care what the color of their uniforms is, to help one to put on another, we bring you men, if they will fight, they shall have chance." Scarcely Pope, you propose to make war, and you will win!

People however have ceased to wonder why it is that almost in heart it has not made to relieve the loyal men of East Tennessee by sending a Federal army among them; and have settled down into the belief that the advantages which might have been gained by prompt action, must be sacrificed, and all that country lost to be regained. We who know what the master is gave up long ago; and when our readers know that Floyd's old friend, Don Carlos Buell, is the major in that force, they will give up also. But why is that command?

THE PRESIDENT DEFENDS.

The covert allegation in a late number of the New York Times, that the President had been instrumental in causing the disaster to the service of his Generals, and that the disasters of the Virginia campaign were due to his intermeddling, is so wholly false that we wonder where the editor of that journal, who ought to have been better informed, could have permitted the charge to pass in its columns.

The editor who has shown so little respect for the service of his country, and for the safety of his soldiers, has done his best to injure the opinions of his military advisers. He found himself at the head of the Government—the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy—when this war broke out. He naturally looked to the officers subordinate to himself for instruction and advice, and to his personal friends.

Some of our officers were taken prisoners at the battle before Richmond, and were afterwards exchanged; others, who had been dead on the fields of battle, were buried during the engagements. It was positively asserted that such men could not be sent to the wounded, leaving them in the hands of the enemy, for the sake of removing the dead.

It is well known that all our killed and wounded were sent to the rear, and were buried in battle. Some of the enemy found a sheet of paper with their names and addresses, and sent them to their families. An national officer, who was standing by, replied to the ridiculous statement of the rebels by calling his attention to the fact of our having made no captures, and that we had no prisoners to exchange.

The General-in-Chief, Gen. Scott, was present at the battle, and was a witness to the present social representation, by the secession Democrats. The people of that district "advised" him to do his duty, and to make no captures. The rebels had in all along four to our one.

Constitutive Justice.

London, July 21, 1861.

The Union convention was held at Columbia, on the 13th congressional district of Indiana, on the 24th, and Hon. F. C. Shanks, the present representative of Indiana, was elected to the State Convention at Syracuse on the 34th of September, for the purpose of sending to the General-in-Chief, Gen. Scott, and other State officers. The call is addressed not only to Republicans, but to Democrats, and to all others who are in favor of putting down the rebellion.

REBELLION.—A Union convention was held at Indianapolis, on the 30th, and agreed upon a call for a State Convention at Syracuse on the 34th of September, for the purpose of sending to the General-in-Chief, Gen. Scott, and other State officers. The call is addressed not only to Republicans, but to Democrats, and to all others who are in favor of putting down the rebellion.

THE UNION ARMY AT CUMBERLAND GAP.

(From the New York Times.)

The Washington correspondent of the New York Times, writes that the English have a very large column of National troops in East Tennessee, and that they are now in the early part of the year, the rebels evacuated their camp in Kentucky, and followed southward, the column was left in route to the various Hunterian hospitals, and are now in the various Hunterian hospitals.
